The Fresh Prince of Bel-Air turned Will Smith into a global superstar. Can lightning strike twice for newcomer Jabari Banks in the dark reboot? Ellen E Jones meets the star and creator of Bel-Air

Twice upon a time in Hollywood

When Jabari Banks first learned of auditions taking place for the lead role in Bel-Air, a dark reimagining of his favourite 90s sitcom, he heard his destiny calling. "I was like, 'Oh, I'm perfect for this!' I knew at that moment: this has got to be me."

At the time, Banks was just 23 and still a musical theatre student who had never starred in anything, but what he lacked in work experience he made up for in relevant life experience. Banks is a talented rapper who knows his way around the basketball court and, like the song says, he's "West Philadelphia born and raised". In other words, he has a lot in common with the original Fresh Prince of Bel-Air, Will Smith, who was a 21-year-old rapper in 1990 when his own life got, in the words of the show's theme tune, flipped-turned upside down.

It started as a chance meeting with TV producer Benny Medina and within six weeks, Smith had relocated cross-country, co-written a brilliantly catchy theme tune with the legendary Quincy Jones (another of the show's execs) and was on set filming the first episode. The sitcom's premise was based on Medina's own teenage experience of moving in with a rich white family in Beverly Hills, after growing up poor in South LA, but it also mirrored Smith's own Philly-street-to-LA-stardom journey. Thirty years later, the life-imitating-art-imitating-life cycle continues, says Banks: "My life parallels Will's life in the show so specifically, it's really crazy. To be in front of the camera, and to play on this level is so beautiful."

The first episode of Bel-Air features Banks' character Will enjoying a slower, more reflective version of the "Yo, homes, smell ya later" cab ride depicted in the sitcom's opening credits. Shooting the part where Will steps out of the cab to gather his thoughts and enjoy the view was surreal: "I'm sitting there on Mulholland Drive and Will, the character, is looking out; but that's Jabari's first time on Mulholland Drive too, y'know?"

When The Fresh Prince of Bel-Air debuted in September 1990, it met an audience already familiar with, and enthusiastic about, Black sitcoms. The Cosby Show, depicting an upper-middle class doctor's family in Brooklyn had been on air since 1984 and its slightly edgier spin-off, A Different World, about students at a historically Black college in Virginia, had run from 1987. In the UK, Desmond's, starring Norman Beaton as the grumpy-gregarious proprietor of a Peckham barbershop, was already a flagship show among Channel 4's proudly multicultural output. Yet The Fresh Prince of Bel-Air still felt fresh, and has remained so in the decades since, through re-runs and into the streaming era: "I wasn't even born before it was off the air," says Banks. "My family had this six-series boxset that would be on repeat in my home. So I definitely caught all the episodes, for sure ... This show basically raised me."

Many others share that abiding affection. The show's theme tune has become a karaoke standard among millennials, and the teary televised reunion in 2020 was warmly received by a lockdown audience eager for nostalgic comfort-viewing. Even before then, The Fresh Prince of Bel-Air was present enough in the ether to inspire the creativity of Morgan Cooper, a 27-year-old filmmaker from Kansas City. He created Bel-Air, a four-minute fan film, in the form of a trailer for an imagined reboot and uploaded it to YouTube in March 2019, where it has racked up 7.2m views. Among those viewers was Will Smith - now a 50-year-old movie star and father of three with a mansion of his own. Uncle Phil would be proud.

Flipped-turned upside down
Will Smith as the original Fresh Prince of Bel-Air

In his new guise of Hollywood mogul, Smith helped usher a real show into existence, with Cooper on board as a co-executive producer and director. Their first major challenge was to find a lead: "We needed a unicorn, because that's exactly who Will was in the original," says Cooper. "We needed a young man who had the charm, the charisma, and [who was] able to give you dramatic performances while still having great comedic timing." Auditions were held nationwide, but it just so happens their unicorn shared Smith's hometown. "I remember meeting Jabari in Philly and within five minutes, I knew he was our Will."

Bel-Air's other characters and premise have also stuck close to their model, but the episodes have lengthened, from sitcom-standard 22 mins to encompass a widening perspective. Banks summarises this as "if all of the characters from the original wrote in a diary, and we got to open up that diary and dive deep into their feelings". That tone is matched by a visual style that translates the royal reference of the title into Pan-Africanist imagery, reminiscent of Beyoncé's Black Is King 2020 visual album, all rendered in a refined palette of teal and grey. Sadly, that means no backwards caps or 90s neons for this generation's Will. It would be too obviously retro. "We've been asking ourselves, how do we recreate that style, but for now," says Banks, before adding more hopefully, "and, y'know, maybe it'd be a good Halloween costume for me, for next year?"

Another thing that hasn't changed too much is the subject matter. Cooper believes there's still much progress to be made in terms of Black representation on TV. "There are so many Black stories that still need to be told," he says. "In Bel-Air, we see Black people from different places and with different perspectives having uncomfortable conversations with each other. I think that discourse is incredibly important." In fact, The Fresh Prince of Bel-Air was always about expanding the narrow on-screen depiction of Blackness. Medina's real-life adoptive family had been white, but he made the TV version Black because, as he explained to Ebony magazine in 1991: "That way we could explore Black-on-Black prejudice as well as Black class differences."

The writers of the sitcom were mostly white, as was standard in the industry at the time, but the cast felt their voices were heard. Script changes were made "whenever we would come across moments that they wrote, that was like, 'This wouldn't happen ... Black people don't do this,'" said original Carlton actor, Alfonso Ribeiro in the reunion special. "[That] was what made this show special, because we made sure that we were authentic every episode."

OG fans and recent re-watchers may remember the show's frequent moments of political engagement, such as Aunt Viv's reaction to Will's Malcolm X T-shirt in season one - "You can wear the T-shirt, you can put up the posters ... but unless you know all the history behind it, you're trivialising the entire struggle." Or the time when Jazzy Jeff refused to lower his hands to testify in court: "Dude's got a gun. Next thing you know I got six warning shots in my back."

So it is testament to the sitcom's legacy that Bel-Air has room to go further still. For instance, while it's easy to imagine the Bel-Air scene in which Carlton (Olly Sholotan) and Will fall out over the N-word appearing in the 90s show, it's harder to imagine how they could have mined the same emotional depths back then, without being cut short by a punchline or a move to commercial break.

Then there are the subtle but significant shifts in characterisation. In the 90s, the wider Black diaspora was represented by Geoffrey, a Jeeves to Will's Wooster, played - very properly indeed - by the Saint Lucia-born, Surrey-residing Joseph Marcell. Now Geoffrey is played by Jimmy Akingbola. He's no longer posh, but still a commanding presence, as a smart-casual, iPad-wielding "house manager". Akingbola's depiction of Black British masculinity is one that would not have made sense to US audiences, prior to Idris Elba and Daniel Kaluuya reaching the heights of Hollywood's A-list.

"Woo! He's cold isn't he?" agrees Banks, with an admiring chuckle. "And you know what? Jimmy's been so adamant and so meticulous to depict the Black British experience differently than that perception from an American standpoint, which is that all British people speak the Queen's English."

Bel-Air is in many ways a faithful heir to the Fresh Prince's throne, but the kingdom all around is changing. Now social media exists to pick up what the show puts down, and Banks is already eagerly anticipating what comes next: "I know Black Twitter's going to take to it, and that's the thing we need to do, that's how we move forward as society; we need to start having difficult conversations."

Bel-Air will be on Peacock from 14 February on Sky and NOW

Mel Giedroyc: Unforgivable

Missing Taskmaster? Your favourite cheeky schoolmarm has just the thing

One thing the last two years and counting of the pandemic has given us (which no one gives it credit for) is: a renewed love of parlour games. Everyone is down on the coronavirus, but we do have to give it that particular due. "Oh, but we couldn't go to the supermarket ..." Yeah, but you got Zoom quizzes. "Oh, but we couldn't see our loved ones for months on end ..." Hmm, OK, but Quiplash and Among Us filled a void. "Oh, but I lost my job and couldn't get a haircut ..." Fine. But you had six months to sit on the floor doing jigsaws and getting too into adult board games? What is the problem, exactly? Honestly, I think some people just like moaning.

Anyway, this is a TV column, and it should behave accordingly. The second series of Mel Giedroyc: Unforgivable drops on Dave this week (10pm, Tuesday), and it feels, somehow, related. The format is thus: Mel Giedroyc sits on a throne and coaxes a revolving cast of British comedians into performing tasks and games. She has an underling who sits on a lower chair than her and they do various pre-planned skits that never quite hit, but that is sort of the charm. Katherine Ryan is in an episode, Jamali Maddix in another. Hold on. Himm. No, it's not Taskmaster, you're right. But it is, isn't it?

It feels a bit dismissive to say Unforgivable is "Taskmaster, but Dave still has the license for it", but to ignore the role Taskmaster plays in the genesis of all this seems like ignoring a very large, Greg Davies-shaped elephant in the room. Taskmaster (I am not explaining what Taskmaster is. You are reading the Guardian. You know what Taskmaster is) was the breakout hit from Dave's get-away-from-Top-Gear-repeats-by-elevating-British-comedy tactic. It defected to Channel 4, but there are a lot of interesting shows with interesting comedians leftover: the James Acaster and Josh Widdicombe-fronted Hypothetical, the deeply enjoyable British As Folk, the rebrand of Late Night Mash. Unforgivable is along the same lines - British comedians you haven't heard of getting their first big run at TV, a few comedy stalwarts in the mix, some pre-planned storytelling that rapidly goes off-piste - that makes all of them so good.

We've had a fallow few years with panel shows. The Cats are always doing Countdown, of course, and Would I Lie To You? and Mock the Week are still mainstays on the BBC, but it hasn't felt like the giddy panel-heavy days of the late 90s and early 00s for a while. Why? You would have thought the easiest path to TV gold would be "put five to six funny people in a room together and let them be unscriptedly rude", but sometimes it just doesn't work. Is it the cultural temperature at the time? Too many celebrities in the mix and not enough comedians? Is it the exact right format? - but it feels like Dave is closest to cracking the alchemy right now. Unforgivable can clank a little; every episode starts agonisingly slowly. Giedroyc brightly asking everyone, "Tell us an embarrassing story!" can veer into office away-day ice-breaker awkwardness, and I could do with fewer rhyming puns - but it understands the best way to make funny people be funny on TV is, simply, by letting them.

Giedroyc helps - her post-Bake Off pivot to "wholesome cheeky schoolmarm" has been a delight to watch - as does Lou Sanders who, in the role of underling, consistently comes out with the sort of lines you can't believe survived an edit (the new series starts with a throwaway joke featuring a toilet roll prop that made me have to pause the screener to compose myself). Their nice/naughty dynamic helps pull structure out of what is, for the first third of each episode at least, people sat in chairs storytelling.

But the episodes get more manic as they progress: essentially, someone always gets comfortable enough to tell the country the last place and time they shat themselves, and once that Rubicon has been crossed (normally around the 24-minute mark), there are a lot more laughs. It's not quite the can't-miss format of the show that came before it, but it's a valiant attempt. Listen up, the rest of British TV! Put more funny people on shows where they can be funny! Dave has figured it out! Catch up!

These comics are a delight - and some come out with lines so naughty you can't believe they survived the edit

WHAT'S ON Television

Pick of the week This Is Going to Hurt Tuesday, 9pm, BBC One

A screaming maelstrom of patients swirl around Ben Whishaw, as he crouches atop a moving gurney, battling to save a patient's baby. En route, he's leapt from a lift, shouted at a trainee doctor and not even had time to change into his scrubs to start his shift. "Welcome to the NHS," he sighs to camera. This seven-part adaptation of obstetrician-turned-comedy writer Adam Kay's bestselling book sees Whishaw on captivating form as a doctor on the brink, who relies on wisecracks instead of tears to get through long shifts while also trying to maintain his personal relationships. It is a stellar comedy drama that's full of dry humour, heroism and, occasionally, tear-jerking tragedy. Alexi Duggins madcap antics tonight as Joan Collins joins the panel and there's another double eviction. AD

Ant & Dec's Limitless Win 8.30pm, ITV

It's the last chance for a contestant to bankrupt ITV tonight, as the quiz with a potentially unending pot of prize money reaches its final episode. Brothers Lee and Kye will be the contestants attempting to push the jackpot into the trillions - failing that, they'll hopefully get at least a few grand. AD

Celebrity Mastermind, Sat

Secrets of the Royal Palaces 8.30pm, Channel 5

The odd history of Brighton Pavilion is revealed in tonight's edition of palace-based tales. It's joined by the story of the Princes in the Tower, talk of Fergie, and the truth behind an iconic Princess Di photo that you never knew you wanted - how the photographer played ping pong with William and Harry mid-shoot. AD

Freeze: Skating on the Edge 9pm, BBC Three

This stirring documentary series follows the remarkable athleticism of figure skaters. Inevitably, they are a highly strung bunch, all living on a high wire from which it's a long way down. You'll find yourself thoroughly invested. Phil Harrison

The John Bishop Show

9.35pm, ITV

The six-week primetime run for the everyman scouse comic reaches its penultimate show. In many

Chloe, Sun

Starstruck, Mon

ways, it's an old school variety night - Bishop begins each week with a topical standup routine before sauntering over to the sofa to chat with his special guests. There'll be transmissions from the global standup scene too, as the host showcases talent from around the world. PH

Sunday

Pick of the day Chloe

9pm, BBC One

This glossy thriller sets up the delightfully complex character of Becky (Erin Doherty), a bored temp who loves a scroll on social media. The mysterious Chloe (Poppy Gilbert, last seen being truly disturbing in Netflix banger Stay Close) is her Instagram obsession. But when she dies, Becky edges closer to Chloe's best friend, and before long she's sipping wine and eating pavlova with her inner circle. What starts out as a scarily realistic portrayal of Insta-worship escalates very quickly. Hannah Verdiere

Luxury Holidays for Less

6.45pm, Channel 4

Is now the time to nab the trip of a lifetime? Sabrina Grant and Sophie Morgan share various hacks to maximise what you get for your money with the help of experts such as former BA chairman Álex Cruz. Also, a very hands-on test finds luggage that combines value with durability. Graeme Virtue

The Green Planet

7pm, BBC One

Scudding clouds, swaying meadows and writhing tendrils of hyperlapsed climbing plants feature in tonight's hour of sumptuously shot natural world footage. David Attenborough looks at the evolution of farming techniques and visits the Millennium Seedbank in Kew Gardens, which safely stores seeds, lest their plants become extinct. AD

Trigger Point

9pm, ITV

The headlong bomb disposal drama crammed with conspiracies and cliffhangers continues. As the terror campaign escalates, new expo leader Lana (Vicky McClure) is at the sharp end, attempting to defuse volatile devices in stressful circumstances. McClure is as good as ever, but the breakout star might be the remote-controlled robot. GV

Murder in the Valleys

9pm, Sky Crime

In 1999, three generations of one family were murdered in a night, leading to the biggest criminal investigation in Welsh history. The first episode of this four-part documentary sees the police reinvestigate the case. It's full of archive footage of police interviews, emotional testimony from those involved and tales of a divided community. AD

The Curse

10pm, Channel 4

A comedy fanboy-pleasing cast list lies at the heart of this new crime caper. It teams Tom Davis - the writer/actor behind King Gary and Murder in Successville - with the majority of the People Just Do Nothing crew. It's an impeccably styled production that's set amid the grotty warehouses of 80s east London, in which the leads attempt to get away with a robbery. AD

Monday

Pick of the day Starstruck

10pm, BBC Three

Rose Matafeo's whip-smart, gender-swapped Notting Hill-style romantic comedy returns. As we rejoin the almost-couple Jessie and Tom, there are hints of commitment but they're generally spiked by Jessie's insecurity and Tom's diffidence. The writing has a good handle on the sense of stasis that can attach itself to rootless twenty-somethings adrift among the excitements and impossibilities of London. And the couple's attraction and confusion always plays out in plausibly human and relatable ways. PH

No Return

9pm, ITV

Kathy (Sheridan Smith) sees her family holiday in Turkey become a nightmare when her teenage son Noah (Louis Ashbourne Serkis) is arrested for a serious sexual assault after a beach party. As golden-hued footage of swimming pools gives way to the tense sound of fizzing electronica, this tense drama leaves you guessing. Is Noah guilty, or has he been framed? AD

60 Days With The Gypsies

9pm, Channel 4

Host Ed Stafford buys a caravan and spends 60 days on various sites trying to understand the traveller lifestyle. Should he side with the travellers, whose existence might be criminalised by an upcoming act of parliament? Or will he sympathise with angry locals? AD

Boobs

10pm, Channel 4

"How can we take back ownership of our breasts?" In this thoughtful documentary, Summer Camp singer Elizabeth Sankey sets out to battle the male-influenced way breasts are discussed. It's full of revealing interviews with women, plus the kind of disturbingly misogynistic 80s film/TV portrayals that beckon your palm to your forehead. An insightful, wry take on the topic. AD

Cheaters, Tue

Euphoria

10.05pm, Sky Atlantic

After a disastrous intervention, Rue (Zendaya) is on the run from everyone: family, friends, the cops. Just as it becomes too much, Zendaya, both tragic and exasperating, manages to draw you back in. It's a credit to Euphoria's young cast that the show can get away with this much melodrama. Henry Wong

Imagine ... Marian Keyes

10.35pm, BBC One

Alan Yentob meets Marian Keyes, the queen of "chick lit" - not that the throwaway term does her justice. Keyes is as warm and engaging as her darkly funny books while she talks about what she's learned in life, from working as a waitress to becoming one of the finest storytellers around. HV

Tuesday

Pick of the day

Cheaters

9.50pm, BBC One

"No one knows their neighbours now." So says lead character Josh in the first of this zippy, well-acted, 18-part comedy drama told in 10-minute episodes (it's a triple bill tonight). He has a point, given that he headed to Finland and ended up downing shots with a Lonely Planet writer and cheating on his partner with her - only to discover that they live over the road from each other in London. The humour's enjoyably dry, the premise is great, and it's set to get even better. AD

AstraZeneca: A Vaccine for the World

9pm, BBC Two

The AstraZeneca jab was a source of national pride when it arrived in late 2020, seeming to herald an end to the pandemic. But the scientists who developed it had a greater ambition: to see it distributed around the whole world. In this documentary, Fergus Walsh tracks that noble aspiration. PH

The Gilded Age

9pm, Sky Atlantic

Julian Fellowes' starry, silly period drama canters on. George suffers some bad luck that puts the new railway station in jeopardy, while Agnes bears the ultimate indignity: not being heeded, as her headstrong niece Marian refuses to steer clear of Mr Raikes. Jack Seale

Toast of Tinseltown

10pm, BBC Two

It's the series finale and thus finally time for Toast's long-awaited appearance in the new Star Wars movie. And no one's happier than Clem Fandango and Danny Bear. Although given Toast's track record, their celebration may prove premature. AD

Mel Giedroyc: Unforgivable

10pm, Dave

Cannabis theft, Nazi waxworks and cheating at Street Fighter are among the topics for the return of this gameshow. Tonight's confessors of outrageous antics include Sarah Millican, Jamali Maddix and Chris McCausland. AD

Wednesday

Pick of the day

Mega Mansion Hunters

10pm, Channel 4

"We are literally turning estate agency on its head," says Tyron Ash, a sports car-driving property mogul who likes to celebrate megabucks deals by yelling, "Fuck you!" and giving the middle finger to thin air. We're immersed in the rivalries of his agents, as they battle for commission, engage in Selling Sunset-esque squabbling and utter dense, Apprentice-style braggadocio. Who will ultimately succeed in selling the £5m Surrey mansion? No one with a sense of modesty. AD

We Are England

7.30pm, BBC One

Week three of these regional films focuses on entrepreneurs: we meet photographer Conor McDonnell (Leeds), who revisits the people and places that shaped his career; and 22-year-old Jake (Norwich), who left school with two GCSEs and now turns over £2m at his recycling business. Ali Catterall

The Bay

9pm, ITV

Morecambe Bay brings a fresh wave of drama this week, though this time it's personal for DS Townsend, who's on the hunt for her missing son. Things get worse when her ex-husband turns up. Meanwhile, the team investigates Saif's ever-murkier murder, which currently hinges on a fixed boxing match. HW

The Fast and the Farmer-ish

9pm, BBC Three

A slightly bizarre series hosted by Tom Pemberton in which tractor-

Mega Mansion Hunters, Wed

heads compete in wheel-spinning, diesel-spewing challenges including The Bog Run (racing a tractor through a bog) and The X Tractor (driving a tractor in an X shape) in the hope of being crowned the UK's best tractor team. Imagine a mixture of Scrapyard Challenge, It's A Knockout and Clarkson-era Top Gear. PH

The Mind of Herbert Clunkerdunk

10pm, BBC Two

Spencer Jones's surreal comedy comes to an end tonight, as Herbert jigs with glee at the news of a theatre audition, ponders an anniversary present and performs pop-rap about being followed by fluffy monsters. He dresses up as a tooth, dons fake eyeballs and plays a tiny pink keyboard: intensely strange business as usual, then. AD

Martin Fishback

10.15pm, BBC Two

Creating a genuinely funny sitcom by porting a Twitter profile on to TV is no mean feat. All the more reason to enjoy the accomplished 15-minute comedy debut for the character of Martin Fishback - a brashly egotistical ex-Colgate employee turned dreadful crime writer. It's part exposition of his dreadful detective, Roger le Carré, part enjoyable family comedy. AD

Thursday

Pick of the day

The Fear Index

9pm, Sky Atlantic

This new four-part thriller, based on the Robert Harris novel, rolls groggily out of bed with an opener that could have conveyed the necessary plot information in a quarter of the time. Josh Hartnett, always careful not to overact, is scientist-turned-hedge-fund genius Dr Alex Hoffman, whose new algorithm might be a step too far. Cue a plot to destroy the world's financial markets. JS

The Apprentice

9pm, BBC One

The undersung joy of this reality TV classic is the moment when Alan Sugar pays an early-morning surprise call to the contestants and catches them scruffing about in PJs. Expect to delight in the panic of sleep-crusted business goofs, before they try to profit off the rise in staycations. AD

Mary Beard's Forbidden Art

9pm, BBC Two

Controversial profiled art tonight ranges from Otto Dix's work (banned by the Nazis) and Derek Jarman's paintings to Tyler Shields and Kathy Griffin's "decapitated Trump" (it earned Griffin an FBI investigation). Beard explores a range of contested culture that has spoken truth to power, or conversely, been weaponised to serve political ends. AC

Kate Garraway's Life Stories

9pm, ITV

While the nation is unlikely to find the absence of Piers Morgan from this interview show too great an obstacle to overcome, it's brave of new host Kate Garraway to give it a try. Tonight, she welcomes Liverpool and England football veteran John Barnes. PH

Who Killed Billie-Jo?

9pm, Channel 5

The 1997 murder of 13-year-old Billie-Jo Jenkins at her home in Hastings was a high-profile tragedy which became a national sensation when her foster father was charged, convicted, but then ultimately acquitted. This film reexamines the still unsolved case 25 years on, with contributions from police, lawyers and forensic scientists. GV

First Dates: Valentines

10pm, Channel 4

What fresh romance will be in the restaurant's air tonight? Most notably, there's a genuine hard luck story in the shape of 35-year-old Chris, who recently experienced the triple-whammy of redundancy, divorce and a heart attack. Surely a change of luck is overdue? PH

Friday

Pick of the day

Veleno: The Town of Lost Children

9pm, Sky Documentaries

In the 90s, 16 children were taken from their families in northern Italy. They never returned. After being accused of running a paedophile ring, the parents have always maintained their innocence. This five-part documentary follows a journalist unpicking the case decades later. Were these children victims of satanic abuse, or did hysteria blur the truth? It's a slow, sometimes salacious burn, but everyone involved is treated with respect thanks to director Hugo Berkeley's forensic approach. HW

Your Garden Made Perfect

8pm, BBC Two

More garden design under the cheerful supervision of host Angela Scanlon. Tonight's biggest challenge for the designers is Andrew and Paolo - Paolo is easygoing enough, but Andrew's amiable yet persistent control-freakery will need to be overcome. PH

George Clarke's Amazing Spaces

8pm, Channel 4

Tonight, a Norfolk dad surprises his camping-crazy kids with a renovated VW van, while an Isle of Wight bomb shelter becomes a bar. Elsewhere, Master craftsman Will Hardie checks out a Russian-inspired Grayson Perry creation on an Essex river bank. AC

A Discovery of Witches

9pm, Sky Max

The penultimate episode gives fans of the fantasy series some of the pay-offs they've been waiting for, as Diana (Teresa Palmer) once again causes waves in the Bodleian Library, as she did back at the very start. Plus, a big villain is comprehensively whupped. JS

Dating No Filter

10pm, Sky Max

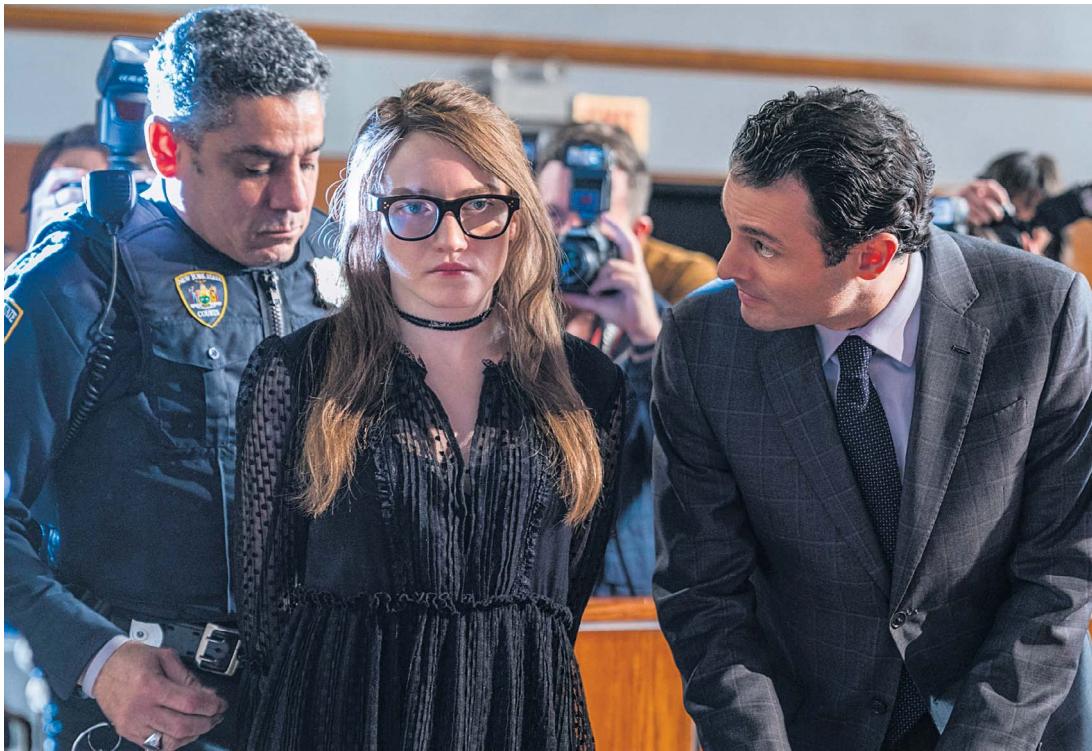

Half Gogglebox, half First Dates, this series lets a pair of sofa-bound comedians commentate on date footage. Returning for a second series, the talent roster includes London Hughes, Asim Chaudry and Joel Dommett, who are on fine, zingy form as they shoot out quips like: "He's dressed like he's going to bundle her in a van!" AD

The Graham Norton Show

10.35pm, BBC One

It's a line-up of Oscar winners tonight, with Helen Mirren and Jim Broadbent chatting about their new film The Duke. Bridgerton's Golda Roshevuel also joins in. AD

WHAT'S ON Streaming

Pick of the week

Inventing Anna

Netflix, from Friday

"This whole story is completely true. Apart from the parts that are totally made up." In terms of constructing a narrative about a con woman, this is a good place to start. Until her arrest in 2017, Anna Sorokin (AKA Delvey) posed as a wealthy German heiress in order to infiltrate and defraud New York high society. This new serial drama from Shonda Rhimes tells her startling story - through the eyes of Vivian Kent (Anna Chlumsky), a journalist struggling to write a feature about her. Julia Garner plays Sorokin as an odd, unsettling enigma - pivoting unpredictably between brittle vulnerability and extreme arrogance; defying any attempts to categorise or explain her. Phil Harrison

Disenchantment

Netflix, from Wednesday
Unmistakably Matt Groening in every way, the Simpsons and Futurama creator's satirical medieval fantasy adventure cartoon for adults continues into part four. Fans last saw Lucy (Eric Andre) being decapitated, Elfo (Nat Faxon) being taken away by ogres, and Bean (Abbi Jacobson) being dragged to hell (well, taken down in an elevator) by her mother Queen Dagmar (Sharon Horgan) to marry a mysterious man. Plenty of action to dive straight back into, then. The gang races to reunite over the course of 10 episodes. Hollie Richardson

Magpie Murders

Britbox, from Thursday
"A whodunnit without an ending? It won't even be worth the paper that it won't be printed on." Susan Ryeland (Lesley Manville) heads to Suffolk to find the ending herself in this adaptation of Anthony Horowitz's 2016 bestselling murder mystery within a murder mystery. Cue a parallel tale spanning two time periods: 50s and contemporary Britain. With Tim McMullan (Foyle's War), Daniel Mays (Line of Duty) and Pippa Haywood (Bodyguard, Bridgerton) joining the cast, this six-part series is set to be a satisfying dose of armchair detective fun. HR

Rooney

Amazon Prime Video, from Friday
"He wanted to destroy everything that was in front of him." That is Thierry Henry's verdict on his encounters with Wayne Rooney - a terrifyingly precocious footballing prodigy who, touting a mixture of sublime ability and tangible menace, barged on to the scene in 2002. This documentary looks at Wayne's world in its entirety, from his rough and ready childhood in Croxteth to his colourful private life. Chapter two - the management years - unfolds in a surprisingly promising style, creating a timely film albeit a fairly generic one. PH

Ms Pat: Y'all Wanna Hear Something Crazy?

Netflix, from Tuesday

For Georgia comedian Ms. Pat, the road to a Netflix special has been long and bumpy one. She's a survivor of sexual abuse who was selling crack cocaine on the streets of Atlanta by the age of 15. She was encouraged to attempt standup comedy by a caseworker and, since 2002, has been firmly establishing herself on the scene. This hour-long set turns a turbulent life story into dark humour, even when dealing with poverty, juvenile detention and the drugs game. Not for the faint-hearted but bracing, incredibly funny and eventually redemptive stuff. PH

Best in Miniature

Discovery +, from Friday

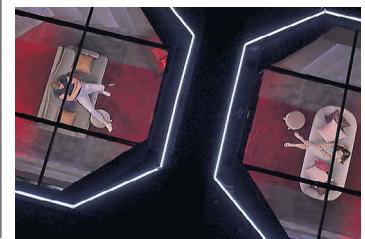

In the last few months alone we've had a televised snowman-building contest and pottery competition where contestants had to make gnomes. The next step is, naturally, a competitive show for miniaturists. Hosted by standup comedian Aba Amuquandoh, this sweet new concept sees 11 highly skilled artists attempt to build their dream home in miniature form. It actually sounds like quite a therapeutic watch, but don't be fooled: this is a small yet mighty battle for the winner to take home a cash prize and be crowned Best in Miniature. HR

Love is Blind

Netflix, from Friday

Reality telly continues to aimlessly but endlessly swipe right, trying out the multiple formulas and tones that can be encompassed by dating shows. Now it's time for a second series of this voyeuristic, exploitative, jarringly unpleasant and wildly addictive nightmare of a series in which contestants live in pods, converse with potential mates without seeing them, then decide whether to propose or not. It's a recipe for tears, tantrums and traumas, and as such, it's hard to watch. But if staged human melodrama is your thing, it's just as hard to switch off. PH

Janet Jackson reveals all in a soul-baring documentary

Janet Jackson Sky Documentaries

The singer's new four-part documentary is an attempt to control her own story. Executive produced by Jackson and her brother Randy, and five years in the making, it consolidates her 40 years as a recording artist. The real coup is the archive material Jackson and director Ben Hirsch pull from a decade's worth of home videos; to the outside world, Jackson's confidence was soaring at the time, but behind-the-scenes footage shows a woman who appears to still be stifled and domineered by men. On the matter of Michael, "guilty by association" is how she describes herself, reflecting on how his child sexual abuse allegations affected her career. It's hard to know whether this documentary will reposition Jackson as a pop pioneer, but it's absurd that a musician of her stature should have slipped from view. Simran Hans

Pam & Tommy Disney+

Disintering the sex tape scandal that engulfed the celebrity couple of the mid-90s - Baywatch star Pamela Anderson and Motley Crue drummer, Tommy Lee - Robert Siegel's eight-part miniseries looks at what happened to the pair after a private tape of them having sex on their honeymoon went very, very public. After a fun opener that sees unpaid, fired contractor Rand Gauthier (Seth Rogen) take revenge on Lee by stealing a safe from his garage, it becomes a warm, funny, intelligent and rather moving drama, with astonishing lead performances from Lily James and Sebastian Stan. They each achieve the feat of uncannily resembling - aesthetically, vocally, and in every mannerism - the real-life people, without descending into mimicry. However, this is perhaps undermined by the fact that the whole enterprise has been undertaken without Anderson's approval. Lucy Mangan

The Tinder Swindler

Netflix

Audiences love nothing more than a scam right now, and this documentary about a convicted conman fits into the pantheon neatly. It is a pacy, gripping feature-length film with plenty of compassion for the women who were romanced by a man calling himself Simon Leviev on dating app Tinder. It is careful and precise in its telling of how Leviev turned out not to be the suave suitor he made himself out to be online, despite trips on private jets, extravagant bouquets of roses and stays at five-star hotels. Snappy and smart, it leaves you wanting more, rather than scraping the barrel for every possible angle. Rebecca Nicholson

Suspicion

Apple TV+

This eight-part mystery begins with a kidnap. In the corridor of a New York hotel, a young man is quietly nabbed, unobtrusively stuffed in a suitcase and wheeled out. He's the student son of Katherine Newman (Uma Thurman), head of one of the world's most influential communications companies and controversial nominee for a UK ambassadorship. From there, the plot hangs upon the shoulders of a quartet of apparently unconnected characters, who we see being arrested and interrogated, gradually revealing links to the hotel, to the Newmans and potentially each other. It's a loose, baggy thing at first, but a quarter of the way through it approaches the tight, urgent slickness needed to pull off this kind of show. LM

Pick of the week

Welcome to Our Show

Widely available, episodes weekly

It's official: "millennial TV show rewatches with the original cast" is the podcast genre du jour. We've had The OC, Scrubs and Sex and the City - now it's time for Zooey Deschanel, Hannah Simone, and Lamorne Morris to reminiscence over every minute detail that went into the making of Emmy-nominated New Girl. With seven seasons to revisit, this is one for Deschanel fans in search of a weekly hit of nostalgia to plug into. Hollie Richardson

Feast is Feast with Big Zuu

Widely available, episodes weekly

This food-based podcast from bubbly chef and grime MC Big Zuu is as upbeat and fun as you'd expect. Celeb-packed guest interviews see Craig David talking about his habit of eating two Boost bars on childhood bus journeys and Jermaine Jenas explaining his hunt for places to eat great Caribbean food. Alexi Duggins

Female Pilot Club

Widely available

The team behind this podcast challenge the male dominance of TV comedy writing with a night that stages readings of uncommissioned pilot scripts written by women. Here, they bring you the hilarious highlights of those shows, with the likes of Robert Webb and Tracy-Ann Oberman reading work from talent whose credits include having written for Succession. AD

Seventeen: Conversations with My Teenage Self

Widely available, episodes from Mon Laura Leigh Abby (pictured above right) turned 17 in the heteronormative world of 2002, with its acceptable cruelty and AOL messenger chats, so opening her diaries brings up a whole load of feelings. With Y2K nostalgia all around, she doesn't always look back fondly as she's confronted with the darker side of her teenage experiences. Hannah Verdiere

Normal Gossip

Widely available, episodes weekly

Pandemic phone conversations made Kelsey McKinney miss gossip. Not the celebrity type, but those little morsels that you share about your workmate's sister. So she launched a podcast celebrating damage-free gossip with guests who share tangled tales about neighbours and the backstory of pandemic boyfriends. HV

Radio

Berlin Alexanderplatz

Sat, 2.30pm, Radio 4

Claes Bang narrates this two-part dramatisation of Alfred Döblin's 1929 modernist masterpiece, regularly hailed for changing urban writing for ever. Lee Ross plays Franz, an ex-con trying to get straight in Berlin - but he quickly realises that he cannot extract himself from the world of misery, crime and little opportunity that he was tangled in before going to prison. Hollie Richardson

The Documentary: No Satisfaction

Tue, 8.05pm, BBC World Service

Sex: everyone's at it. Apart from twentysomethings, apparently. In this judgment-free, eye-opening investigation, 21-year-old Anoushka Mutanda-Dougherty is talking to her peers to find out why. In Tokyo, we meet DJ Kohsuke, who's too hung up on status to meet girls. Other young people - like "homo-romantic asexual" Darren - are exploring intimacy on their own terms. "Sex can be part of a relationship for me," he explains. "But I don't need it to be." Henry Wong

The Backlog

Wed, 4pm, Radio 4

Why is the NHS under such strain, and what can be done about it? The simple answer is: "Underinvestment and more investment." But that won't sustain a three-part documentary, so The Economist's health policy editor, Natasha Loder, deep-dives in. She tries to measure exactly how much pressure services are under, with winter biting and patients who stayed away due to Covid now urgently needing help - six million people are waiting for routine treatment in England. Frontline workers, policy experts and patients tell their stories. Jack Seale

The Forum: Sofya Kovalevskaya

Thu, 10.05am, BBC World Service

"In the mid-19th century, the number of women allowed to get academic degrees was vanishingly small. In mathematics it was almost unheard of." So begins this profile, introduced by Bridget Kendall, of Russian mathematician Sofya Kovalevskaya (pictured above). She was one of the first modern European women to gain a doctorate in maths, become a tenured professor, and in her own words, hold "a duty to destroy whatever obstacles I can in the paths of others". Ali Catterall

WHAT'S ON Film

Pick of the week
The King's Man
Wednesday, Disney+

The first of Matthew Vaughn's Kingsman movies was an unexpected treat; a big, fun, surprisingly moving Marvel-does-Bond rollercoaster. Interest waned, however, with 2017's Kingsman: The Golden Circle, a film so incoherent it appeared to have been assembled at speed by idiots. The newest offering, The King's Man, is something of a soft reset. It's a prequel, charting Ralph Fiennes' Zelig-style journey through the events that led to world war one. There's a lot of fun to be had spotting all the real-life historical figures dotted throughout the mayhem - Rhys Ifans, for one, appears to be having the time of his life as Rasputin. A ridiculous Kingsman v Hitler sequel awaits. Stuart Heritage

Collateral

Saturday, 10.35pm, ITV
Michael Mann's 2004 thriller deserves recognition not only for its pioneering cinematography - shot overwhelmingly on digital before the technology was perfected, Collateral has a gritty, pixelated immediacy - but for Tom Cruise's white-hot thermite performance. As hired assassin Vincent, tasked with forcing nervous taxi driver Jamie Foxx to chauffeur him around Los Angeles for a night, this is Cruise using his intensity for bad rather than good for once. His shark-like evil sits in heavy contrast to the woozy, insomniac sprawl of the city around him. SH

Sorry We Missed You

Sunday, 10pm, BBC Two
Ken Loach's most recent film was released in 2019, before the pandemic, but only seems to have gained urgency in the intervening years. One of his angriest films in decades, it depicts the dire working conditions doled out to professional delivery drivers: zero-hour contracts, heavy rental fees, no insurance. The toll all this takes on Kris Hitchen's lead character is abominable. Can a project like this change the employment policies of a notoriously shoddy industry? Probably not. But once seen, you'll never take a delivery driver for granted again. SH

You're Next

Monday, 9pm, Horror Channel
Thanks to the commercial success of last year's Godzilla vs Kong, Adam Wingard now firmly has his feet under the Hollywood table. But whatever he chooses to do next, it's unlikely to better the panache of his 2011 break-out hit You're Next. The joy of this cheap, grimy slasher movie is in how lightly it wears its premise. In any other hands, a story like this - about intruders in animal masks systematically offing a group of semi-likable victims - would be a gruesome sludge of a thing. Wingard, though, fills the movie with endless wit, black humour and wild invention. Beautiful. SH

The Pit and the Pendulum

Friday, 9pm, Talking Pictures TV
Although not one for Edgar Allan Poe purists, there's still an astonishing amount of fun to be had with Roger Corman's 1961 adaptation. At its centre is an unhinged turn by Vincent Price as a castle-owning weirdo with a torture device in his basement. The entire performance is one long I-can't-believe-they're-letting-me-do-this wink to the audience, but the magic thing is that it stops just short of undermining the scares. When this film stands to attention, it has moments of pure terror. SH

Bigbug

Friday, Netflix
A new Jean-Pierre Jeunet film deserves to be celebrated in the streets. His last film, The Young and Prodigious TS Spivet, came out almost a decade ago; Micmacs, his most recent film in his native French, came out back in the noughties. Jeunet's long-awaited comeback vehicle, released through Netflix, is Bigbug. A film set in the future, it is perhaps best to describe Bigbug as Tim Burton doing The Terminator. The Yonyx, a breed of AI designed to help humanity, goes rogue and declares mankind to be superfluous. If you can withstand the heavy dose of whimsy, this is a winner. SH

I Want You Back

Friday, Amazon Prime Video
Just when you thought the romcom was dead, out comes Amazon with a great big defibrillator. Charlie Day and Jenny Slate play two strangers who find themselves dumped at exactly the same time. Together they hatch a plan: team up and destroy their exes' new relationships, Strangers on a Train-style, so they can win them back. How will it end? You can probably work it out. But romcoms live or die on the likability of their leads, and I Want You Back benefits from the sparkly unpredictability of Day and Slate. Are they the new Tom Hanks and Meg Ryan? Maybe. SH

A cordless vacuum with

REAL OOMPH!

Ultra-light yet with the suction power of a full-size corded.

Halo™ Capsule™

"This vacuum scored 100% in all our tests."

"The Halo is nothing short of fantastic at cleaning."

Cordless is a great idea, the ability to move about the house freely without the restraint of a cord or the weight of a heavy vacuum. Except, up until now, cordless vacuums have all suffered from one thing. Just not enough oomph in the suction power department.

The Halo Capsule is different.

Ultra-light thanks to its unique carbon fibre construction, the Halo weighs just 2.6kg yet has the equivalent suction power of a full-size vacuum. It won't quit on you half way through your cleaning either. The Halo keeps on going for over 60 minutes* before needing recharging. When combined with its huge 1.6L capacity, it means you can now deep clean the whole house in just one go.

Try doing that with any other cordless or with such speed and ease using a corded. And when you've finished, the Halo's Dust Pouch enables you to get rid of the dirt without the usual cloud of dust and mess.
